The public everywhere look to the HERALD for the first intimation of any new movement, as well of cliques, societies, and individuals, as of the pelitical chess players; and somehow, to the astoishment of every one, the HERALD does manage to know almost everything before every one else; and I am somewhat surprised to find that, for some weeks past, there have been-being planned, and almost new matured-great, important, yes magnifecent, schemes, of which the HERALD has not said one word. How is this? Is the HERALD keeping this back, until the plan is all matured? or what is the matter with the Herand's wires? I look eagerly ever its columns every day, expecting to see the whole arrangements shadowed forth to an asto-mished and delighted people; but it does not come, and I can keep it no longer from the people, who I know will thank you, and me, too, for giving to them this first intimation of the great glories which destiny is preparing for our glorious country.

Yen will recellect that Mr. Doughas's great speech at the banquet dinner, shadowed forth new, great, and strange things, and the Democratic Review has speken out more plainly; but together they are bit a "small part of the groundwork for the platform of Yeung America." Now, the first plank in this great, glorious, and magnificent platform, is to be the making of Judge Doughas President. That secured, all is accomplished, and he is the man—fate has decided it—and you, Mr. Hanal, no, cannot help it. George Saunders, of the Democratic Review, sayses, and "Young America," and you may as well kneck under, as the saying its, and not impede the way of "a manifest destiny." And new I will tell you how it is all to be brought about. A woman, you know, may often sit quietly in the corner of a room and never be suspected of hearing or understanding one word of what may be going on in another corner of a large saleon; and you know, Mr. Hiskald, that women are often underrated by your sex in their test and knowledge of political matters but I will show you that I do know a great deal more than these wise and great men give me credit for, who have so often run off from me into another corner by the meslves to talk over their plans.

You know that there is no harmony in Pennsylvania between the friends of General Cass and those of Mr. Buchanan, but the latter will control the vote of the State in the Baltimere Corvention, and they will be deadly hestile to Mr. Cass, and if Mr. Buchanan, which all admit he camon do will not, the Pensylvania delegation will vote for any man designated by Mr. Buchanan, neber the nomination, as he will not, the Pensylvania delegation will vote for any man designated by Mr. Buchanan, with the nid of his friends, will make great efforts to get the nomination, which all admit he camon do unless the Senthern States generally will vote for him, and this can be brought about only by bargain, purchase and hele is and in order to gain this point, as the sec

The first great measure of this administration of "Young America" will be to send Gov. Quitman, or John O'Sullivan, or both, to Spain, to demand satisfaction for the injury and insult to the patriots who attempted to free the Cubans against their will; and if satisfaction is not rendered mountly and who attempted to free the Cubans against their will; and if satisfaction is not rendered promptly and fully, why the Chagres line of steamers is to be taken at a fairprise, an expedition is to be fitted out, and Cuba is to be taken, a force under the command of Gov. Quitman is to hold it, and Mr. Hale, of New Hampshire, for his kind feelings to the blacks, would be the governor; and Mr. Law's agent, Mr. Croswell, would take back the steamers at a fair price. These and other matters were all arranged between Mr. Douglas, Mr. Law, and Mr. Saunders, at Mr. Law's house in New York, one Sunday last fall, while Mr. Croswell was at Church. At the same time an agent (secret, of course,) would be sent to Mexico, with a proposal to purchase a strip from the Rio Grande to Mazatlan; but if they will not sell, then adventurers from Texas and other Southern States will go over, join the revolutionists, and expressly deny the power to the government to build and operate it; and how much better than when done by companies or individuals, to whom it might give great power to influence elections, as well as to oppress the people with enormous tolls. But if under the management and control of the government, it could be the means of the greatest good. How many hundreds of thousands of laborers and officials it would employ, and they could have no interest in the elections; and the people at large would pay the annual interest on the money berrowed to build it, and not those who would use it, while the latter would be taxed but lightly for its use. This road is Mr. Douglas's greatest hobby. Mr. Denaldson, editor of the Union, is to be thrown overboard with the "old fogies" and Unionists, because his open, frank countenance too plainly expresses his firm adherence to the constitution and to the Union, and will not show any preference for Mr. Douglas over other candidates. But something may be done for Gen. Armstrong in the way of mail steamer contracts.

Armstrong in the way of mail steamer contracts.

A government "organ," or press, is to be established to do all the printing for the government and for Congress, and also to lead, direct, and form public opinion, especially on all subjects connected with the government or its acts. This organ is to be under the management of Mr. Francis Grund and Mr. Forney, subject to the supervision of Mr. George Saunders, or the President. The number of clerks, of high salary, in all the departments, can be greatly augmented, so that all business, particularly claims, shall be promptly attended to. The army is to be increased, and the navy angmented as specify as possible; towns and cities fortified; contracts for mail steamers frem every place to every place, to the number of five hundred sail of the first class in all, on the same terms as the Collins line.

Such, Mr. Herald, are the outlines for the great plans for glory and renown, and who, except the "old fogics," that will not rejoice in them, and bless the day which gave birth to the man who is to be the great leader of the nation to a higher pinnacle of fame than has been before known! He pinnacle of fame than has been before known! He is yet young, and will not all this elect him for two terms! yes, for four, and why not for life! He, as Louis Napoleon of France, is the man of the times, made expressly for the occasion; there is none like him, and George Saunders says so.

I have been longer telling this than I intended, and I have not told you the half of the strange things which I have seen, heard, and know; but if you treat this as I expect you will, you shall hear from me again.

P. S. A woman, you know, must have a post-script. Ask Mr. George Saunders if he has found the papers which he lost in that street. Not where Mr. Douglas lost his.

[From the Albany Express of the 29th.]

On Saturday we conversed with two or three persons, who went upon the river exploring expedition, and they all agree as to the formation of a new island during the past winter, near Castleton, a short distance south of the point of the island on which the lighthouse stands, and just below the end of the dam. It has formed in the channel where the boats ran last year. The Indiana, in going down, ran on it, but it was then supposed that it was nothing more than ice; but, on returning, the water had fallen, when it was discovered that quite a large island had been formed. The channel runs more to the westward, and from the observation then made, it is thought to be deeper than the old course. Other changes have been caused, which will undoubtedly present new difficulties to the boating interests. On Saturday morning seven sail vessels, sloops and schooners, took leave of us, and proceeded on their way down the river, destined for different ports. Owing to the prevalent "northwester" during Friday night, the tide was very low, and they all ran aground on Castleton bar, where they were laying on Saturday afternoon. The Oliver Ellsworth, steam tug, went down to New Baltimor on Saturday morning, after two or three barges, but owing to the low state of the water, only succeeded in bringing one to the city—the Ringgold—a Philadelphia barge. The steamer New Yerk came out on Saturday, with colors flying, and prepared for the trip by "coaling up" to be in readiness for a departure.

Dr. Bacon's Last Lecture of the Season, on stern Travel. BAIR-BREADTH 'SCAPES AND ADVENTURES AMONG

THE REV. Dr. Bacon, of New Haven, delivered the last tan. in which he and his companies penetrated some distance, surrounded by great and imminent dangers, and from which they finally with diffully made a retreat. In describing these adventures, the lecturer particularized a good deal, and gave graphic and induce descriptions of the control o Arrived at the Agar's or Covernor's house, which was a cost of fortress, is a twinkling they were disarmed, and simost stripped, till the grae man himself, a portly-looking savage, appearing, put an end to the subordinate's pinndering, and commenced on his own account, taking all their mency, which they had with their baggage, and about one half of everything else that he prized—many things he rejected. They were ordered to retire under a tree, and the servant coming to them seen after told then, in construation, they were about to be killed. The lecturer here gave a minute account, as he afterwards heard it, of the comultation, many considerations arising to embarrass the Agar, who was at first fully determined to slay them, totally disregarding the Pashas missive; but finally despatched them, with their remaining property, to a distant village of a Molah, or religious teacher—for numer the Mahorsetan's they their remaining property, to a distant village of a Molah, or religious teacher—for amone the Mahomedan's they included by another armed band, who asked for leave to kult them. This was denied, and the occurrence gave them some hope. At length the escort began to fall off, and with only three remaining, they arrived in safety at the village of the Molah Mustapha, where all appeared to be in prose. The Molah himself, a very respeciable locking man about forty or forty-five, habited in black robes and a white turban, received them very kindly; exemined their passport, which he pronounced all right, and offered his services. The travellers wished to proceed to the order has been to this he dare not do, as directions had been sent to all Agars to kill them, and it was arranged he should accompany them back towards Acre and leave them in care of a brother. Arrived at the next Agar's headquarters, similar danger awaited them as before; but by the Molah's interession they were received and hospitably entertained. Having exhausted all other arguments it seemed the Molah had won over this last savage by representing he would, by complying with the wiches of government, obtain the place of collector of the poli-tax, which the other would by his conduct lose. This touched his tender point, and he divulged his rival's secret, thus revealing the whole piot. A letter, which he produced, had been sent on from one Agar to another, directing them to kill the uravellers. The last, when have seen was so embaurassed in his proceeding had endersed this by his secretary to the present holder saying he had taken half their property, and directing him to take the other, and kill them. In the hope of obtaining the office, he agreed to prove this to the government, and send one of his sons as an escort for the travellers. Much to their satisfaction the Molah Mustapha size ascompanied them some distance, when they parted with grateful acknowledgments. Protection of Life on Board Stram Vessels.

—An important bill for the better security of life on board steamers, has been introduced into Congress by the Committee on Commerce, the principal provisions of which are as follows:—"No vessel to be licensed unless suitably provided against loss or danger from fire—nor if any combustible material be placed within eighteen inches of the boiler pipes, or machinery, unless a column of water intervenes; and to be provided with not less than three foreing pumps, one to be worked by steam, and always kept in readiness for immediate use. Every vessel, with the exception of ferry boats navigating small streams, to be provided with two boats, one to be a metallic fire-proof life boat; passenger boats to be provided with one boat for every fifty passengers they carry. A cork life preserver is to be kept for every possenger on board, and eight fire buckets for every possenger on board, and eight fire buckets for every 100 tons measurement. No cotton curtains to be used in any case on board; nor shall powder, oil, or turpentine, or materials which ignite by friction, be carried by any such vessels as freight; and when kept on board as stores, they must be placed in metallic vessels. Persons appointed as inspectors must be known for their practical knowledge of ship building, and the uses of steam in navigation—so as to be competent to make a reliable estimate of the strength and sea worthiness of the vessels under their inspection. The construction of the boilers and the machinery, they are particularly enjoined to examine. The hull of every steamer to be inspected at least once in every six months. The boilers hall also be inspected as often, and subjected to hydrostatic pressure. The inspectors are instructed to see that the safety valves are of suitable dimensions, and that the safety valves are of suitable dimensions, and that the safety valves are complied with. The stock market opened heavy this morning, and continued depressed throughout the first board Reading Railroad was moderately active, but could not be sustained. Compared with prices current at the close on Saturday, there was this morning a decline in Reading Rail-road of % per cent; Eric Railroad, ¼; Harlem, %; Delaware and Hudson, 14; Zinc Company, 16. Nicaragua Transit Company advanced & per cent, with small sales. Speculation in Wall street has fairly run out. The bubble has not violently collapsed, but it has commenced sink-ing, and will probably quietly settle down to the original shape and size. Brokers in the street, depending upon shape and size. Brokers in the street, depending upon commissions, or those depending upon a commission business, for support or profits, have lately had a hard time, and many have no doubt been compelled to enter in speculations to keep their heads above water a little longer. There are no outsiders in the market. They are as scarce as swallows in winter, and equally wild. They hover around the outskirts of the street, afraid to enter the offices of either bulls or bears. In the meantime, the regular speculating brokers are fleecing each other. How long this state of things is likely to continue, depends entirely upon the ability of the street operators to keep the ball up between them. They have, thus far, had the game entirely to themselves, and outsiders seem well enough pleased with looking on, apparently with no desire to enter the lists on either side.

These bonds are in sums of $1,000, bearing 7 per cent interest, payable semi-annually, principal payable in 1866, secured by a mortgage of the whole property of the road, and are convertible into the stock of the company at the option of the holders. The amount of bonds to be thus issued, under the mortgage, is limited to $800,000, of which $100,000 have been disposed of, and will constitute the whole debt of the company.

This is an honest and just act. It is the result of the sober second thought; and although it is rather late to do justice to the old creditors—the old bondholders—it is not too late to save the new class of creditors. Within the past two years, or since the Legislature compelled the company to close its construction account, a floating or unfunded debt of more than one and a kalf millions of dollars has been contracted; and it is for the purpose of preventing an increase of this debt, or to provide in some way for the payment of all accruing liabilities, that the pas-sage of the above bill is required. The Reading Railroad Company controls an immense influence at Harrisburg; and as its resources are unlimited, it will only be by hard work that such laws will be passed as the creditors are entitled to, or such as their own protection demands.

There is nothing new in this table. It shows about the usual shipment of produce, &c., and a limited value, con-

140 280 1,042 135 This is pretty fair for the season. The canals of Ohlo sow in navigable order, and as large amounts of prot duce are waiting shipment, there will probably be considerable activity on all the line, for some time.

The Schuytkill Navigation Company, in order to secure an active movement of the boatmen on their line, during the current season, offer premiums of $290, $150, and $100 to the boats making the greatest number of trips between Schuylkill Haven and New York, Schuylkill Ha-ven and Philadelphia, Port Clinton and New York, and Port Clinton and Philadelphia; also proportionate prices for the next highest numbers of trips.
